I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant, DANIEL MACE.

From Hon. A. F. Morrison.

Indianapolis, (Ia.,) June 26, 1852. GENTLEMEN: Your invitation to be present at the Democratic festival at Tammany Hall on the approaching anniversary of our national independence was very thankfully received.

Old Tammany has long been venerated for its elevated Democratic principles, and for the patriotism of its members. As a society, and as a temple of liberty, it is worthy of the great metropolis of the most mighty. State of this great nation; and its influence is justly felt throughout the extent of this vast republic. It stands as the sun of our political system, and any obscuration, spot, or eclipse upon its disc, casts a shade over the whole land. New York wields a mighty influence among her sister States. She occupies a position of much power, and a heavy responsibility is upon her in her relations to the Democratic party of this confederacy. By her dissensions in 1848, our banner was trailed in the dust and put under the feet of our exulting adversaries; and Whig misrule has in consequence blighted the hopes and the prosperity of the nation for the last four years. Every Democrat, from Maine to Mexico, feels fortified in the belief that the republicans of New York will nobly retrieve their once high character for a strict devotion to duty, and by unity, concession, and energy, re-establish their own ascendency in the State, and their rightful position in the Union.

Bright are the hopes, cheering are the prospects, and essentially important will be the results of our action in the approaching election. The eyes of your brethren are opon you, the destiny of Democracy is at your disposal, and the interests of the nation are in your hands. Democrats never profited by divisions among themselves -such dissensions always innre to the benefit of our opponents. A wise forecast and a hearty co-operation with one another are always the certain causes of deyou are united; that you are one and inseparable." In behalf of the Democracy of Indiana, allow me to remark that every omen augurs well. The Democracy are united as one man in support of Pierce and King. They have proved themselves reliable men both in 1844 and 1848. We confidently expect increased majorities, and feel well assured that we can give from eight to ten
